Encouragement and Counseling Ministry

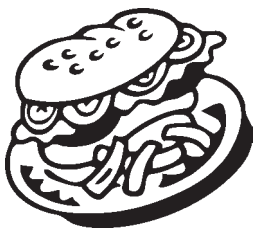

God works through our talents as well as our brokenness and limitations. We are currently reviewing workbooks suggested by Jerry and Lynn Jones during our "Relationship Matters" seminar. Some themes that hold promise for an evening class are; Making Fussing Interesting and Resolving Conflict, Principles for Making Marriage Work, Emotionally Healthy Families and Churches, Becoming Spiritual and Working Through Thinking Errors/Distortions, Encouragement Through Our Brokenness, Refining My Parenting Philosophy, etc.

I heard a story about a man in a distant land and from another culture. He was poor, but physically able to carry water from a nearby stream to a property owner's garden. Each day he filled two pots with water. Each pot was tied to the end of a pole that was lifted and carried across his shoulders. One pot was whole and perfect. The other pot was cracked and half the water drained off during transportation from the stream to the garden. Seasons passed and still the man was unable to financially replace the cracked pot. Finally, he confessed to the landowner that because of the flaw and damage in one of the pots, he hadn't been giving full value regarding their agreement. The landowner said, "I have always known about your flaw, the cracked pot, and as a result I planted flowers by the path. He pointed out the radiant flowers on the side of the path where he carried the water in the cracked pot. The landowner indicated that for two years, he had been able to enjoy the beauty of the flowers as well as pick an arrangement and share them with family members and friends.
