Encouragement and Counseling Ministry

If your pre-teen daughter or son requested your suggestion for something interesting to read, what would you suggest? My wife, Sheri, shared that her father suggested C. S. Lewis and J. R. R. Tolkien from all the books she brought home from school. She read them repeatedly during the long, cold winters in South Dakota. When our sons were pre-teens and we were traveling, she read these books to us.

Sheri and I recently watched all three Hobbit movies based on Tolkien's writings. At the very beginning of the first movie, Bilbo Baggins is asked to go on an adventure involving a struggle between good and evil. He further learned that it was a dangerous journey. He refused and described Hobbits as "not brave or adventurous," but interested in tranquil everyday life in the shire. However, he reconsidered and entered into an agreement with thirteen companions to confront powerful dark forces bent on destroying the inhabitants of Middle Earth.

Has your spiritual walk been adventurous, at times involving great challenges and risks? Has your faith included a "cup of suffering" as you "live into redemption" through Jesus? Or, do you "try to believe and do pretty much what is accepted protocol for a tranquil everyday life in the shire?" There are unsettling factors as we "draw the sword" against damaging distortions, against evil and dark forces operating in our lives, and when we attempt to help others. Encourage one another, share your burdens and share the most wonderful adventure we are able to experience. Ralph
