I Am Not Ashamed

Have you ever been ashamed of yourself? Have you ever been ashamed of someone else?

I have been ashamed of myself several times throughout my life. Each time was debilitating. I wanted to crawl out of my own skin, to hide or to be someone else during those moments. My embarrassment was beyond what I could handle. The shame caused physiological responses, my fight or flight instincts were on full alert yet I could not choose which. My heart beat rapidly. My blood pressure rose each time and I could feel the stressful hum of my vessels pushing against my skin causing my face to flush. Spiritually I felt weak and distant from God. This was especially true during the times that my shame was caused from getting caught and realizing the sin I was involved in. Being ashamed caused me to want to avoid reality and have a short term lack of hope that things could get better and that others loved me.

I have also been ashamed of others in my life. Thankfully this has not happened near as much as the shame I have felt towards myself. I say this because each time I have been ashamed of someone else, I wanted to do everything possible to get away from that person and correct them at the same time. My fight or flight response was to fight and flight. I wanted to fix the person I was ashamed of and have nothing to do with them at the same time. My physiological response was to flood, a condition where your body thinks it needs to protect itself by flooding your defensive senses while at the same time lowering your ability to make good decisions. Spiritually, I found myself forgetting that God loves that person and sent His Son precisely for moments like this.

I am a firm believer that The Way of Jesus is the hope of living no longer being ashamed, of yourself or others. Life as a follower of Jesus is about living into the freedom that our shame no longer enslaves us to the physiological and spiritual effects that it once held on us. It is the realization that God loves you and others in the midst of shame and does everything we need for us to not let the affects of shame destroy us. The hope that sin is forgiven and there is freedom to sin less as we are made sinless in Jesus. The truth that God loves us unconditionally.

In Romans 1:16-17 Paul says

“For I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God for salvation to everyone who believes, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. For in it the righteousness of God is revealed from faith for faith, as it is written, ‘The righteous shall live by faith.’”

Paul writes as a response to others trying to make followers of Jesus feel shame, and the followers in Rome trying to make others feel ashamed because their sin is different than theirs (read Romans 2-3 to see this). He destroys the negative affects of shame by declaring that he has no shame of the gospel!

I want you to try something next time you feel ashamed for yourself or someone else, pause and declare your hope for God's story. Go ahead and quote Paul and say out loud, "I am not ashamed of the gospel (the good news of Jesus)." There is a twofold reason why this will bless you. First, it will help slow down the physiological response to shame so that your body's protective mechanisms do not interfere with your ability to think. Second, it will help you live into the faith that God is very much able to bless, even in these worse of situations, that He is present.

As John declares of Jesus in John 3:16-17. For God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have eternal life. For God did not send his Son into the world to condemn the world, but in order that the world might be saved through him.
