I had been gone from home for three days when Dale, my youngest son, was five years old...

Pat (my wife) and Dale were at the airport to meet me when I returned. I was so anxious to talk with Pat that I inadvertently ignored Dale. He repeatedly tried to get my attention, but I said something like "I need to talk to your mother--just hold your horses" in a less than kind voice.

By the time we got home, my usually sweet, people-pleasing child had the whole family in turmoil. His behavior had deteriorated to the point where I was on the verge of spanking him.

Then Pat whispered to me, "Why don't you practice what you preach?"

I was on the verge of punishing my boy when I was misbehaving myself. An empty emotional tank is the most common cause of misbehavior in a young child. I wasn't fulfilling my basic responsibilities as a Christian father. I forgot that I can prevent serious mistakes such as this by asking myself, "What does my child need?" Then I can correct the problem behavior positively rather than by using punishment.

Dale needed a daddy. Through his misbehavior, Dale was asking me, "Do you love me? You won't even talk to me. Don't you love me anymore?"

I took Dale to our bedroom and held him. I filled his emotional tank with eye contact, physical contact and focus attention. After a few minutes, he was his usual, lovable, sweet self. D.
