Story:

What is your favorite part about watching a game? Is it following the story of a team or competitor and the excitement and anticipation that they are going to win over all of the others competing? Maybe you just watch to marvel at the athleticism displayed and are hoping to see something amazing happen. Do you like seeing the communication between players and coaches as you watch the strategy play out? Or are you really just watching to see how everyone follows the rules of the game and if they keep them, or cheat?

I love watching soccer with people in Brazil. They watch the game as if there are three teams on the field: the home team, the opponents, and the officials. If the ref makes a call that is clearly wrong (and sometimes not clearly), the stadium will explode with emotion. If a goal is taken back because a line judge raised their flag for offsides, more emotion pours out of the fans; those who lost a goal are crying out in anger and the fans for the other team with joy and righteousness over the call. It is intense.

A game without rules is not a game to be played at all. No side wins and everyone is confused. You know this to be true if you have ever played a game with a toddler who keeps changing the rules. It is downright frustrating if you are competitive like me. The rules help to determine the purpose of the game and give a language for a story to be shared. This is why we become so entrenched in our opinions on the decisions that are made by the officials.

Praise be to God for the wisdom He gives us as we live the stories of our lives. This wisdom gives us purpose and direction in our stories, and helps us understand the reason penalties occur when we don't follow the rules. God has given us wisdom to live great stories. Tye

TNT FLOAT TRIP!!!

Excited about the possibility of a Float Trip this week hosted by Tye Zola! Meet at the church building at 1:00pm this Thursday, August 5th. Eat lunch before arriving, but dinner will be provided. No cost, but RSVP to either Tye or Megan by Monday so they can make arrangements for canoes and food!!

Thank you for your prayers this week while we were at Little Prairie Bible Camp! Depending on when you are reading this, we are either on our way back home or made it back. It was a very full week looking at how God wants to completely change our lives like he does through the metamorphosis of a butterfly. Fully transformed into a new being, a new creation. It was a wonderful week, but I think we're glad to be back home! I am amazed at the passion and drive our young people have and their desire to keep seeking the Lord.
